Mr. Francis proceeded to call the followingrebutting evidence.

I interpreted for the plaintiff. and I never said that he bad lost his receipt a month before, nothing of the kind; nor did I say. when Mr. Webber was there, that I had made a mistake as to the month, but that it was four days. On the first occasiou I said it was four lavans I had misunderstood the Prince to say so, and at the second interview I corrected it by saying it was the same day. I don't remember Mr. Inchbald saying that it was foolish to have waited so long after the bill was lost before coming to the Bank, as had he come at once the robbery might have been stopped. Mr. Inchbald did not seem to attach much importance to the time the bill was lost; he said the bill was payable to bearer and he paid it to bearer. He pointed out the word "porten" as meaning bearer. Mr. Francis said it was ovident there was no serious attempt on the part of the defence to dispute that the plaintiff was the Prince. He? submitted that no carelessness or neglicence had been shown against the plaintiff whatever. As to the loss of the note, he had kept it with all the care that any person might have been expected to observe, and the same also with his seal. On the other hand he thought it was evident there had been carelessness on the part of the Bank, that of the previous day, was yet capitally adapted There had not been proper inquiries made, and as to the impressions on the two receipts and the plaintiff's chop, nobody comparing the two could have supposed them to have been made by the same chop. It was a very suspicious crioumstance that the chop should have been out out of the document produced. As the agent had been so careless as not to see the difference between the two chops, his statement that the chop which had been out out exactly resembled the one he received from Shanghai was not entitled to much weight. The whole evidence for the defence did not amount to a defence in law, and as to the defendant's carelessness there could be no reasonable doubt. His Lordship then summed up to the jury. suggest no reason why they should not do so, as he listened carefully to every question put to him. and appeared to give ready and straightforward answer to them all, and not to keeping anything back, as was so frequently the case with Chinese witnesses. This Bishop is to be congratulated on the completion of the work; it is to be hoped that the Church will soon be filled with a Christian Chinese congregation. The Breretons of the same mission are on their way out in the steamer Changsha, which left Glasgow on the 8th of September, and are bringing with them two young ladies who are to conduct a girls' school in the old premises of the American Episcopal Mission. The French Consul at Tientsin and his family and the new German Consul—Dr. Retich, formerly at Singapore—at the same port, have been visiting their ministers, and we have been honoured by visits from several financial and other luminaries of the same quarter, so Peking must be increasing in importance. They are very busy at the French Legation at present, and we scarcely ever see any of its members. The repairs outside the British Legation are nearly completed: the Minister's quarters are still in the midst of confusion, but it is hoped they will soon be in a condition to receive the Envoy and his family; the Minister at present occupies the first Secretary's quarters.
